HOW WE AFFECT CHANGE

HELP

Through programs and services that address basic needs

HOPE

From a responsive and caring community

HEALTH

From economic stability to wellness

We are Helping People and Changing Lives!
We are Interconnected, Compassionate and Committed!

YANG'S STORY

Yang, originally from China, faced financial struggles upon immigrating to Los Angeles with his family. Struggling to provide food for his family, he turned to Foothill Unity Center, where weekly food distributions alleviated their worries until he was able to get back on his feet. Grateful for the support, Yang plans to volunteer at the food bank, and share his story of hope to others in need.

MR. P'S STORY

Ralph, known as Mr. P, endured living in his truck while grappling with a debilitating lung disease that required constant reliance on an oxygen tank. Living in his truck, exposed him to unsafe and unhealthy living conditions. Concerned for his health amidst unpredictable weather, he approached Foothill Unity Center. Guided by his caseworker, Gaby, he gradually embraced the health and housing support process, leading to his successful rehousing in Venice Beach after an 8-month journey. Now with a secure place to keep his oxygen tank, Ralph expresses sincere gratitude, leaving with the words, "A changed attitude will change your altitude."

ROBERT'S STORY

For the past 12 years, Robert has relied on our food bank, which he says has been a significant support for those like him who are struggling and seeking additional assistance, particularly in today's challenging times. He is especially grateful for the fresh vegetables and produce that ensures that he is receiving essential and healthy nutritious food. He visits once or twice a month to supplement his needs. "This place has become a lifeline. With ongoing challenges despite the end of the pandemic, the crucial support this food bank provides is especially vital for those who need it the most, who continue to face hardship."

ANNA'S STORY

Anna and her daughter Molly, were residing in a church while struggling to make ends meet. Their situation improved when they received rehousing assistance through Foothill Unity Center's social services. In Anna's words, "This was a blessing because we really needed housing badly. Living in a church where we were unable to shower and cook, so we had to eat out a lot and wasn't good for us health-wise." After securing housing, their greatly improved living conditions brought a sense of gratitude and relief. "It feels good, I was able to sleep very peacefully last night. It's a new thing. A new beginning for us", says Anna.

There's a misconception that as the pandemic eased, so did food insecurity. Instead it's worse.

"There is an elderly population having trouble with getting access to food. For some children, their one meal a day is at school. We can't have a society like that," said Canny Kennard, co-chair of the food equity roundtable group

New study says high housing costs, low income push Californians into homelessness

"People are homeless because their rent is too high. And their options are too few. And they have no cushion," said Dr. Margot Kushel, lead investigator and director of UCSF's Benioff Homelessness and Housing Initiative.

Year in review: California poverty rises as aid ends

Several major social safety net expansions ended in 2023. According to the California Poverty Measure, the state's poverty rate increased from about 11% in 2021 to 13% in early 2023. That means about 5 million Californians remain below the poverty line of about $39,900 a year for a family of four,
